BRANDING

I have created brands from scratch and updated existing ones as well as developing sub-brands. I have applied brands to all manner of collateral and as branding is the staple of graphic design, it had played a major role in my experience to date.

Smart Metering

Smart Study: Comet

Businesses and Households need to cut costs – saving on energy is a good place to start. But at a time when energy prices rise and new technology surrounds us it is shocking that companies, regardless of size or industry, still do not know exactly how much energy they use, how much it will cost and whether they are saving too much. It cannot be acceptable for businesses to have to rely on antiquated manual "meter" reads and receive inaccurate, fortnightly bills which adversely affect cash flow and the bottom line. Households are likewise aware of the need to reduce energy and make savings to encourage...

But change is here

Britain is embarking on a smart metering revolution with domestic and business energy customers benefiting through energy and demand smart meters. Smart meters mean 100% accurate bills and offer the opportunity for businesses to access the most measurement information they need to make the right decisions about their energy consumption.

The benefits of being smart

- 100% accurate energy bills
- Improved financial control
- Energy analysis and management in your hands
- Optimise your built up your existing water
- Switch energy supplier on an informed basis, not blindly

Before Bglobal

Technical and cost constraints meant that manually read electricity meters were not allowed to account for the 85% of UK businesses whose buildings had meters which were located in the non-24-hour market. A half-hourly market has existed for many years where the meters which consume the most energy are read every half-hour. Typically such meters are owned and operated by a small number of big industrial consumers whose bills are therefore accurate (as well as high).

That left more than two million business and public sector customers who were forced to rely on the frequent manual reads and estimated bills. The rigidity of electricity consumption however forced inefficiency in forecasting energy costs, were locked out of access to their detailed consumption data, and often incurred additional fees for valuing their estimated bills.

The energy information that Bglobal's electricity smart meter will provide Transport for London will allow us to make smarter decisions on energy consumption and our carbon footprint.

Ocean Photographic Artwork

The marine world is teeming with the weird and the wonderful, the beautiful and the bizarre. So often ideas for art and design are inspired by the ocean's realm.

Ocean Photographic artwork is high impact, limited edition photographic prints. Using state of the art printing processes the result is incredible artwork for the design-orientated environment.

"I have always been amazed at the vivid colours throughout the liquid world. I find it incredible that such colours can exist in an environment so uncharted and hostile. I wanted to bring these colours to the art world and demonstrate the abstract beauty of what we continually take for granted."

Matt Bailey has created a series of images that fuse together the nature of the oceans with the freshness of the medium. Using special mounting processes each piece of artwork stands out from the wall giving the viewer an impact of the ocean that is quite unexpected and unique.

"I wanted to produce a different type of art, bringing together the vibrancy of the ocean through my photography and interpreting the images onto a blank canvas as a piece of distinctive photographic artwork."

"Eyes have always held a fascination for me, it is the eye of a fish that is without doubt the most beautiful and most intriguing part of their anatomy. It is here that all the colours and textures of the animal converge and concentrate into a perfect abstract."

Each print is part of a limited edition, and will be individually signed by the photographer. A collection of the current portfolio is available for viewing online.

OUR PROCESS

Our team has been assembled to ensure a smooth transition from what is often an unplanned collection of savings products, to a well structured actively managed portfolio, invested to an agreed Asset Allocation in cost and tax effective wrappers.

Our service is both advisory and discretionary. Your approval is always required however on any complex product, e.g. Venture Capital Trusts, Enterprise Scheme, Limited Partnership.

We recognise that every client is different and as such the process is not rigid and will be adapted to suit your needs. The philosophy above however holds true.

Our team has been assembled to ensure a smooth transition from what is often an unplanned collection of savings products, to a well structured actively managed portfolio, invested to an agreed Asset Allocation in cost and tax effective wrappers.
